

Disability inclusion policy

1. Introduction

Motivation Australia recognises the inherent worth and dignity of all people and acknowledges the rights of people with disabilities to participate in all aspects of social, economic and political life on an equal basis with others. Motivation Australia endorses and upholds the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disability (UNCRPD). The purpose of the UNCRPD is to:

‘...promote, protect and ensure the full and equal enjoyment of all human rights and fundamental freedoms of all persons with disabilities, and to promote respect for their inherent dignity’.<sup>i</sup>

This Disability Inclusion Policy represents Motivation Australia’s organisational commitment to disability inclusive development and promoting the full and meaningful participation of people with people with disabilities as partners and beneficiaries of our programmes. This policy accords with and acknowledges the UNCRPD, the Incheon Strategy<sup>1</sup>, the Australian Government’s Development for All 2015-2021 Strategy<sup>2</sup>, and the Pacific Regional Framework for the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.

Motivation Australia’s mission is to enable people to stay healthy, and access rehabilitation and assistive technology from local services through trained personnel. Motivation Australia acknowledges that there are various barriers which may influence and limit access to services for people with disabilities. We recognise that some people with disabilities are affected by intersecting drivers of marginalisation and exclusion, including but not restricted to race, religion, ethnicity, indigeneity, age, displacement, caste, gender, gender identity, sexuality, sexual orientation, poverty, class and socio-economic status and this can compound and amplify the disadvantages that they experience. For example, women and girls, children, the elderly, and those who live further from service providers may experience heightened disadvantage relative to other people with disabilities. We also recognise that some people who experience disabling health conditions do not identify themselves as living with a disability and we respect the self-identity of such people.

Motivation Australia supports a twin track approach to disability inclusive development: we see value in both implementing programmes targeting people with disabilities, and various activities which promote the mainstreaming of disability into all development programmes.

Disability inclusive development.	According to the United Nations, Disability-inclusive development means that all stages of development processes are inclusive of and accessible to persons with disabilities . It requires that all persons be afforded equal access to education, health care services, work and employment, and social protection, among others. Core principles of disability inclusive development include awareness, participation, non-discrimination, accessibility and universal design, gender equity and the twin track approach.

For the purpose of this policy, the following terms are also defined as stated:

- 5.2 Effective disability inclusive development requires that people with disabilities take an active and central role in decision making and are empowered as agents of change.
- 5.3 People with disabilities are a diverse group of people, and this diversity must be respected and considered when planning and implementing disability inclusive development.
